Alpha-1 Antitrypsin Deficiency: Pathogenesis, Clinical ... Alpha-1 antitrypsin deficiency is an autosomal recessive disease. The SERPINA1 gene (formerly known as PI), which encodes the alpha-1 antitrypsin protein, is 12.2 kb and located on the long arm of chromosome 14 (14q31-32.3). The gene is highly pleomorphic, and to date more than 100 allelic variants have been identified. Alpha-1 Antitrypsin Deficiency and Lung Disease Alpha-1 Antitrypsin Deficiency and Lung Disease What is alpha-1 antitrypsin? Alpha-1 antitrypsin is a substance present normally in the blood of all people and is essential for health. It is a protein that is made in the liver and released into the bloodstream. From the bloodstream, alpha-1 antitrypsin moves into the lungs where its work begins. Pathophysiology of Alpha-1 Antitrypsin Lung Disease ... Abstract. Alpha-1 antitrypsin deficiency (AATD) is an inherited disorder characterized by low serum levels of alpha-1 antitrypsin (AAT). Loss of AAT disrupts the protease-antiprotease balance in the lungs, allowing proteases, specifically neutrophil elastase, to act uninhibited and destroy lung matrix and alveolar structures.
