Nowadays computational chemistry is an indispensable tool for elucidation of reaction mechanisms and for understanding the various aspects which govern the outcome of catalytic reactions. This review attempts to survey the recent literature concerning computational studies on hydroformylation and theoretical coordination chemistry results related to hydroformylation. The [HCo(CO) 3] catalyzed hydroformylation of allene and propyne has been investigated at the B3LYP level of density functional theory. It is found that hydroformylation of allene favors the linear anti-Markovnikov product in high regioselectivity both kinetically and thermodynamically.
