Also, in case of any mechanical failure or physical damage of pump internals, the operating engineer should be able to relate the failure to the process unit's operating problems. Any operating engineer, who typically has a chemical engineering background and who desires to protect his pumps from frequent failures must develop not only a good Best practices in pump system design - buildings.xylem.com Cavitation causes pump performance deterioration, mechanical damage, noise and vibration which can ultimately lead to pump failure. Vibration is a common symptom of cavitation, and many times the first sign of an issue. Vibration causes problems for many pump components, including the shaft, bearings and seals. Damages due to Pump Cavitation - EnggCyclopedia Pump cavitation is caused by vaporization of the liquid in pump suction due to several reasons. Experiments claim that a volume of only one per-cent air will cause a loss of head and efficiency. Pump cavitation can severely damage the pump impeller blades and frequent dry running of pumps can damage other pump parts. These damages are described ... Pump Selection Handbook - Multiquip Inc If the pump is dry or has insufficient water for priming it could damage the mechanical seal. Oil-lubricated and occasionally grease-lubricated seals are available on some pumps that provide positive lubrication in the event the pump is run without water. The seal is a common wear part that should also be periodically inspected. A BRIEF INTRODUCTION TO CENTRIFUGAL PUMPS By definition, a centrifugal pump is a machine. More specifically, it is a machine that imparts energy to a fluid. This energy infusion can cause a liquid to flow, rise to a higher level, or both. The centrifugal pump is an extremely simple machine. It is a member of a family known as rotary machines and consists of two basic Pumps 101: Operation, Maintenance and Monitoring Basics Pumps 101: Operation, Maintenance and Monitoring Basics Daniel Kernan Manager Monitoring and Control Group, ITT Executive Summary Pumps are at the heart of most industrial processes, and the second most common machine in the world. Because they are so common, pumps are often overlooked as a potential source of
